You've intercepted two suspicious audio files from a dark web drop. The first one sounds like static—utterly meaningless at first listen. The second? Garbled, distorted speech, unintelligible to the average ear.

They say secrets are often hidden in noise… but only those who read between the frequencies and listen beyond the obvious can uncover the truth.

Are you ready to dive into the static and unearth what was meant to stay buried?